Description and learning objectives:

Everyday dentistry requires bonding. From direct composite restorations to indirect veneers, bonding plays an important role in every clinical practice. Many dentists report that their patients are still experiencing post-operative sensitivity after treatment. Sensitivity can be contributed to the bonding technique and/or the proper treatment of the dentin surface. This CE webinar will cover possible causes for post-operative sensitivity and how to prevent it from happening. During this CE webinar, we will cover

- Understanding the origin of post-operative sensitivity
- Different bonding protocols and their effect on the dentin surface
- Optimizing clinical bonding protocols in order to avoid post-operative sensitivity
